The hungry man

👁 11 ✓ 0 ★ 2

Chapter 1 by Nic B

A hungry man finds himself standing inside a foodstore.

He hadn't eaten for at least 3 day's, because he and his family got snowed in when last weeks heavy snowstorm hit.

Obviously they where unprepared for such an event, and had been eaten leftovers and crumbs until those too ran out, leaving them with nothing but water to drink. When the snow finally melted away enough he was able to squeeze through the window on the top floor of their 2 story house.

He stood there for several minutes staring at the foods, they all looked delicious, but his knees where weak and his stomach was growling in agony.

"Hello" , he said in the direction of the counter.

"I'm really really very hungry, haven't eaten in day's..."

But NO response came?

He noticed the bell on the counter and ringed it a few times very loud.

It had a very beautiful ring to it you could hear it throughout the rather largish shop no matter where you stood. No one came, not even a cat or startled mouse who'd been feasting on the buffet.

locked while everything in here looks untouched like it's been here for years."

He decided to take a look outside, maybe someone knows something, anything... well darn, not a living soul to be seen.
